I. The Government’s Policy on HIV-Positive Migrant Workers Entering Taiwan

Q1: After the migrant worker starts working in Taiwan, can the employer or agency request him/her to receive an HIV screening test or provide the results of the said test?

A1: No.

To respect the human rights of HIV/AIDS patients and comply with the international trend, the “HIV Infection Control, and Patient Rights Protection Act” was amended on February 4th, 2015, and the regulation stipulating that foreigners staying in Taiwan for more than 3 months must be subjected to HIV/AIDS screening was struck out. If the workers still have concerns, they may choose to take the test at their own expense, and the test results may only be disclosed to the applicant, but not their employers. If the employers request that they receive the HIV screening test or provide the test results when recruiting and hiring the migrant workers, they will violate Article 5 of the “Employment Service Act” and fined between NT$60,000 and NT$300,000. Furthermore, the employer’s migrant worker hiring application will not be approved, while their recruitment permit and/or their employment permit will be revoked.

Q2: If the migrant worker becomes HIV-positive after he/she start working in Taiwan, will he/she be deported?

A2: Amended on February 4th, 2015, the HIV Infection Control and Patient Rights Protection Act, has canceled restrictions on HIV-positive foreigners entering, stopping, and residing in the country. Therefore legally the migrant workers will not be deported because of their AIDS status.

Q3: Do HIV-positive migrant workers in Taiwan receive AIDS treatment-related subsidies?

A3: The government does not offer foreigners AIDS treatment subsidies for the first 2 years. However, those who have records of paid medication in Taiwan and join Taiwan's national health insurance after 2 years of medication in Taiwan will be able to apply for the said subsidies as regulated by the National Health Insurance Administration (NHI). For further details, please contact the NHI consultation service hotline 0800-030-598.

Q4: What is the annual cost of treatment for each HIV-positive migrant worker in Taiwan?

A4: The treatment cost is approximately NT$200,000 (about US$7,000) each year, hence we advise migrant workers to receive HIV screening tests in their home country to ascertain their health conditions. If they are tested positive for HIV, they should remain in their home country to receive treatment. Those who wish to work in Taiwan may purchase medical insurance first to cover the cost of HIV/AIDS treatment and prevent financial burden.

Q5: If the migrant workers contract HIV/AIDS in Taiwan, can their employers deport them or terminate their employment permits?

A5: No.
When migrant workers contract HIV, their right to work should still be protected. Since HIV/AIDS is no longer a health-examination item, the migrant workers' employment permit may not be terminated because of AIDS. If a migrant worker contracts AIDS and wishes to return to his/her home country, the agency or employer should help with the necessary procedures for the verification of the termination of the employment contract. If the migrant worker wishes to stay and work in Taiwan, after an agreement is reached with the employer, he/she may apply for a new employer who is willing to hire him/her. In addition, if no employer wishes to hire migrant workers with HIV/AIDS after the contract period has expired, the original employer must make arrangements for the migrant worker to leave the country. If an employment dispute has occurred with the employer and MOL placement regulations have been met, the migrant worker can be approved for placement after the local government has determined that the employer is unable to provide adequate care.

Q6: If a migrant worker with HIV/AIDS is discriminated against or treated unfairly at work, what steps can be taken?

A6: The migrant worker may file a complaint against the employer. If the complaint is not dealt with in time or if the migrant worker is unsatisfied with the outcome, he/she may lodge a complaint through 1955 or the local labor affairs authorities. (Refer to appendix 1)

II. Professional Medical Resources Available for Helping HIV-Positive Migrant Workers

Q7: What happens after the migrant worker is tested positive for HIV?

A7: Since HIV/AIDS is a notifiable communicable disease in Taiwan when the migrant worker is tested positive for HIV at the hospital, the result will be reported to the health authorities, which will, in turn, contact the patient to offer counseling and assistance, as well as refer the patient to relevant medical facilities (such as the designated HIV medical institution; please refer to appendix 2). For medical attention-related problems, please contact various municipal departments of health (Appendix 3).

Q8: What is a designated HIV medical institution? How do I locate the nearest designated HIV medical institution?

A8: Designated HIV medical institutions are approved by the Taiwan Centers for Disease Control (CDC) to provide HIV screening tests, counseling services, and medical care. If you need to find one near you, please search on Taiwan CDC's official website (Home page/Diseases and Conditions/Important Diseases/Type 3 Notifiable Communicable Diseases/HIV Infection/Treatment and Care/Designated Medical Institution (Hospital/Pharmacy)/List of Designated HIV Medical Institutions).

Q9: Are designated HIV medical institutions in Taiwan only open to Taiwanese citizens?

A9: AIDS can now be controlled through modern medicine. There are currently 83 designated HIV hospitals, 1 designated clinic, and 59 designated pharmacies in Taiwan to provide HIV/AIDS patients with necessary medical services regardless of their nationality. However, the government does not subsidize the foreigners' HIV/AIDS medical expenses during the first 2 years of medication in Taiwan. As for medical expenses after 2 years of medication in Taiwan, subsidies will be provided in accordance with NHI regulations after joining Taiwan's national health insurance.

Q10: What other resources and channels are available to offer assistance?

A10: In addition to the aforementioned designated HIV medical institutions and municipal Departments of Health and Health Centers, other private organizations such as Taiwan AIDS Foundation and Taiwan Lourdes Association (see Appendix 4) also offers services including AIDS health education and promotion, HIV screening test, consultation and individual counseling, etc. Furthermore, LGBT health centers (Appendix 5) also provide services and consultations. You may seek assistance at the nearest location. For more HIV/AIDS-related information, please browse the Taiwan CDC's official website or call 1922 hotline.

Q11: Does the Taiwan CDC have a toll-free hotline?

A11: Please call the 1922 Disease Reporting and Consultation Hotline, the Taiwan CDC 24-hour toll-free hotline, if you have any infectious disease-related questions.

III. AIDS Health Education and Promotion

Q12: What is AIDS?

A12: AIDS (acquired immunodeficiency syndrome) is a disease caused by HIV. HIV-positive patients usually do not fall ill right away, and the early symptoms of the infection are similar to that of influenza. However, the virus will continue to replicate, causing the infected to gradually lose immunity and ultimately result in death.

Q13: What are the routes of HIV transmission?

A13: HIV is transmitted through blood and body fluids. Since HIV has very specific routes of transmission, you do not have to worry about being infected by your friends or classmates through normal interactions. The transmission routes of HIV are:

- (1) Infection through sex: Engaging in unsafe sex (more than one sexual partner without using a condom correctly and water-based lubricant throughout sexual intercourse).
- (2) Infection through blood: Sharing the same needle, syringe, and diluent or sharp objects such as razor or toothbrush with HIV-positive patients.
- (3) Mother-to-child transmission: HIV-positive mothers can transmit HIV to her newborn directly during pregnancy, delivery, or breastfeeding.

Q14: What are the symptoms of AIDS?

A14: In the early stages of HIV-infection, some people may not exhibit any symptoms at all, while some exhibit influenza-like symptoms such as fever, headache, rash, swollen lymph nodes at the neck, etc. during the first several weeks or first couple of months. These symptoms usually will disappear within 1-2 weeks and hence are often misdiagnosed. AIDS-related symptoms are extremely complex including weight loss, loss of appetite, as well as constant and frequent skin rashes.

Q15: Do people die quickly after contracting HIV?

A15: Many people believe that after contracting the HIV, patients tend to deteriorate into AIDS patients quickly, but the fact is that not all HIV-positive patients become AIDS patients because effective drugs have been developed to control the viral load inside the patients' body and allow them to lead healthier lives. Consequently, if you are infected with HIV, there is no need to panic, since proactive, early treatment coupled with regular medication will endow you with the living quality comparable to people who are not HIV-positive.

Q16: Do HIV-positive migrant workers need to live differently?

A16: HIV-positive migrant workers should live normally like other people, there is no need to make special arrangements expect regular medication and proactive treatment.

Q17: What should I do if I am exposed to a suspected HIV incident (such as contacting with blood)?

A17: If you are uncertain of the magnitude of the risk of infection, please call Taiwan CDC's 1922 hotline and seek medical attention at a designated AIDS hospital as early as possible after exposure, so that a physician can determine your conditions and evaluate whether preventive HIV medication is needed.

Q18: What should you do if you suspect that you may have contracted HIV?

A18: You may approach screening test locations throughout Taiwan to receive tests and consultation. Resources available to you include:

- (1) Anonymous screen testing: To protect personal privacy, many hospitals in Taiwan provide anonymous screen testing services, and some of them offer an online booking service. People may use the Anonymous Consultation network (<http://hiva.cdc.gov.tw/>) to assess the risk of AIDS infection without making a registration or leaving their personal details. Afterward, they can access the links to these hospitals to make an online booking.

- (2) Various Departments of Health/Health Centers, LGBT health centers, private organizations (such as Taiwan AIDS Foundation, Taiwan Tongzhi (LGBTQ+) Hotline Association, and Taiwan Lourdes Association) also provide free screening test services.

Q19: Under what circumstances do I need to take the HIV screening test?

A19: If you have practiced unsafe sex (disregarding who you have practiced unsafe sex with, this includes your intimate partner), you will need to take the HIV screening test at least once a year. Those people who have behaviors which puts them at risk of getting infected with HIV (such as sharing needles with others, changing sexual partners frequently, having sex with the usage of drugs or alcohols, infected with sexually transmitted diseases) should take screening tests at least once every 3-6 months.
